For most people, data privacy usually means private information like bank account numbers, social security numbers, passwords, emails, and phone numbers. But for businesses, data privacy goes beyond your email address and phone number

Data privacy, sometimes also referred to as information privacy, is an area of data protection that concerns the proper handling of sensitive data, including personal data and other confidential data, such as certain financial data and intellectual property data, to meet regulatory requirements as well.

It involves more than just compliance. A successful privacy program needs to be embedded into the foundation of an organization. When done and implemented correctly, it would benefit customers, employees and the overall business.

In today's Twitter, What's App and Facebook times, it becomes all the more imperative that we have a master talk on this subject. The Seminar is an attempt to provide understanding of what is data privacy and how it is not only meant to protect customers but also companies and their employees from security breaches.

There will be a short q & a session for participants followed by the talk. We invite you to attend the seminar.

There is NO PARTICIPATION FEE. However, ONLINE REGISTRATION IS MANDATORY.
